SANDY'S DAILY MESSAGE

On 14th May 1973 the first US space station - Skylab - which measured 118ft in height and weighed 77 tons was launched into orbit around the earth.

I know this fact will appeal to some of the pupils, as I have seen some fantastic research work being carried out. Perhaps this fact could lead to more investigation?

For those of you interested in space and the solar system, today and tomorrow, both the moon and mars will be close together in the morning sky. You will have to get up early to see them, and in reality Mars is approximately 425 times further away from the Earth than the moon.

This doesn't happen very often and with the clear skies we have at the moment, it may be worth a look.

ACTIVITIES / LINKS THAT MIGHT BE HELPFUL

Lesley has sent us in her weekly recipe, just in time for weekend baking.

This week, she has sent in a recipe for Cheese Muffins - a savoury treat - sounds delicious!

Please find it attached.

WHAT'S EVERYONE BEEN UP TO?

Luke has been baking again. We hear that these cakes were supposed to be vanilla fairy cakes (from the recipe Frances sent home to Hazel Class) but Luke felt they would taste much better if they were chocolate!

Luke is also enjoying his regular walks with his dog and this morning he loved seeing all the sheep in the woods at the back of his house. We wonder just how many sheep he saw?

Lucas wasted no time in making a song hand from the activity sheet Nic sent home to everyone yesterday. It's turned out really well Lucas. Well done - Nic will be so pleased to see it.

What has been very nice to hear from lots of parents is how much the children are helping indoors. Here's a picture of Lucas helping Claire do the washing up.

We also heard from Suriya today that Afraz (Willow Class) is washing up his plate and glass, filling the washing machine for her and emptying the bin bag.

It's good to hear everyone is helping each other and being more thoughtful - one of the positives to come out of this lockdown.

Remember to send in any acts of kindness for next week's Mental Health Awareness focus.
